

J.P. Morgan Asset Management's research team achieve double honours in the Thomson Reuters Extel Survey

Extel Survey 2010

J.P.Morgan Asset Management won double honours in the prestigious 2010 Thomson Reuters Extel Survey with top rankings for best buy-side firm and best individual buy-side analyst.

Leading Pan-European Fund Management Firm

J.P. Morgan Asset Management won the Leading Pan-European Fund Management Firm award. Also in an outstanding testament to the research capabilities of the London-based J.P. Morgan Asset Management team, the firm's analysts were awarded top ranks in 23 of the 32 specialised sectors surveyed.

Leading Pan-European Fund Management Team

In addition, for the fourth consecutive year, a J.P. Morgan Asset Management analyst was named the overall leading Pan-European Fund Management Individual. Out of 3,342 buy-side individuals surveyed, top honours in 2010 went to Peter Lawrence, who covers the capital goods and aerospace and defence sectors for the business. 2009 winner Asif Jeevanjee was ranked in second place, with Peter Edwards and Steven Ho completing an impressive J.P. Morgan Asset Management presence in the top 10.

What is the Thomson Reuters Extel Survey?

The Thomson Reuters Extel Survey is an annual survey in which the investment community assesses the leading Pan-European financial companies and professionals. Quoted companies and sell-side analysts vote for the best buy-side analyst in each of 32 sectors.

2010's survey reflects the contribution of 200 brokerage firms/research houses and 650 of Europe's largest quoted companies.
